Transplant Immunosuppression 2011: The Difficult Issues

This course will focus on current trends in immunosuppressive protocols, risk factors for transplantation, and many of the difficult issues encountered in the clinical care of solid organ transplant recipients. A major component of the course will be the opportunity to interact with the faculty - nationally and internationally recognized experts. In addition, there will be a pre-conference course, specifically designed for Transplant Coordinators.

“This is routinely the best conference for the transplant clinician.”

Ron Shapiro, MD, Thomas E. Starzl Transplant Institute
STATEMENT OF NEED
This course is designed to meet the educational needs of transplant clinicians who care for patients pre- and post- transplantation. The course will feature a pre-conference workshop designed to meet the educational needs of transplant coordinators. In addition, the course will feature pro and con panel discussions, practical tips on various treatments, and oral abstract sessions.

AUDIENCE
The conference has been planned to be of interest to transplant surgeons, physicians, coordinators, researchers, and other health professionals involved in the care of transplant patients.

EDUCATIONAL OBJECTIVES
Following this conference, participants should be able to:
• Describe the current immunosuppressive protocols and their outcomes.
• Apply tailored recipient care protocols designed for improved outcomes in specific, complex patient populations.
• Describe antibody-mediated rejection, its prevention and treatment.
